Poverty Plagues D.C. Families

Study finds nearly 1 in 3 working families is poor in the city

Nearly one in three working families in the District is poor, according to a report being released Monday that blasts the D.C. government for failing to steer more of the benefits of the recent economic boom to local residents. The study assails the city's economic-development policies for paying too little attention to low-income residents. It also charges that the D.C. government's job-training programs are inadequate and poorly monitored.

"The common perception is that people who are low-income ... are not working, or not working enough. They are working. They're just not earning enough," said Ed Lazere, executive director of the DC Fiscal Policy Institute, a liberal think tank. It co-authored the study with the D.C. Appleseed Center for Law and Justice, an independent advocacy group. The report calls for more educational opportunities for adult workers, particularly the development of a full-fledged community college system in D.C. It also urges city officials to work in advance with employers to tailor job training to upcoming ventures. Pointing to the success of the DC USA retail complex in Columbia Heights, Neil O. Albert, the deputy mayor for planning and economic development, said: "We think it is absolutely critical that we make sure real economic opportunities are spread to all residents in the District." Sir, Your Leg Is Hissing

A jury acquitted a man of smuggling endangered iguanas in his hollowed-out prosthetic leg but convicted him of concealing and possessing the endangered species. The jury rejected charges Thursday that Jereme James stole Fiji Island banded iguanas while visiting the South Pacific in September 2002. During an undercover probe, James told investigators he had sold three iguanas for a total of $32,000, prosecutors said. (AP)

Two men are accused of stealing a swimming pool from a Granby, Mass., backyard. Timothy Morin, 37, and David Hawley, 18, were charged Friday with trespassing, larceny, conspiracy and

Police also recovered from the car seven automotive batteries, a coil of copper pipe, wire with a copper core, an aluminum pneumatic manifold with brass fittings, bolt cutters, metal shears and a hammer. Pump Error Drains Texas, Alaska of Oil

Traffic was backed up and police were called to control the crowd after a Wilmington, N.C., gas station accidentally set the pump price at 35 cents per gallon. Hundreds of drivers flooded a BP station after the price dropped around 9 a.m. Thursday. Station employee Shane Weller said the price for premium gasoline was supposed to be $3.35 per gallon. He complained that customers paid the cheaper price all day without saying a word. It was all the extra traffic that led station employees to the mistake around 6 p.m. (AP)

Clinton Drills Obama

For the third straight day, Sen. Hillary Clinton hammered Sen. Barack Obama over his comments about the frustrations of Americans who live in small towns, this time saying he reinforced negative stereotypes people have about Democrats.

"Since this whole discussion started over Senator Obama's remarks, Democrats have reached out to me to say that we can't afford for people to believe that the Democratic Party is elitist and out of touch," Clinton said at a news conference in Scranton, Pa. "His comments were elitist and divisive," she added.

She said Obama needed to address the comments further, adding, "What people are looking for is an explanation: What does he really believe?"

Obama on Saturday said he had been inartful in describing people who live in small towns as people who "cling" to religion, guns and sentiments that are opposed to immigration and free trade because they are "bitter" over economic conditions. And he expressed regret over the remark, which he made last week at a fundraiser. PERRY BACON JR.

World Bank Chief Sounds the Alarm

Zoellick: Quick action needed to help world's poor as food prices rise

WASHINGTON | The president of the World Bank on Sunday urged immediate action to deal with mounting food prices that have caused hunger and deadly violence in several countries.

Robert Zoellick said the international community has "to put our money where our mouth is" and act now to help hungry people. "It is as stark as that."

He called on governments to rapidly carry out commitments to provide the U.N. World Food Program with $500 million in emergency aid it needs by May 1.

He said the bank is granting an additional $10 million to Haiti for feeding programs, "and I understand others are looking to help."

"It is critical that governments confirm their commitments as soon as possible and others begin to commit," Zoellick said. Prices have only risen further since the WFP issued that appeal, so it is urgent that governments step up, he said.

After a meeting of the bank's policy-setting committee, Zoellick said that the fall of the government in Haiti over the weekend after a wave of deadly rioting and looting over food prices underscores the importance of quick international action. A U.N. police officer was killed Saturday in Haiti's capital.

Zoellick said that international finance meetings are "often about talk," but he noted a "greater sense of intensity and focus" among ministers; now, he said, they have to "translate it into greater action."

He said in a rough analysis the bank estimates that a doubling of food prices over the last three years could potentially push people in low-income countries deeper into poverty.

"This is not just a question of short term needs, as important as they are," Zoellick said. "This is about ensuring that future generations don't pay a price, too."

Abortion Opponents Support Obama

Key endorsements in Pa., Ind. come despite ideological differences

POLITICS | As strong and consistent abortion foes, Sen. Robert P. Casey Jr. of Pennsylvania and former congressman Timothy J. Roemer of Indiana are anomalies in the Democratic Party. Yet both are backing Sen. Barack Obama, whom one conservative blogger dubbed "the most pro-abortion candidate ever."

As firmly as Casey and Roemer have adhered to their opposition, Obama has never supported a single measure that would curtail access to abortion — even under controversial circumstances. But Casey and Roemer have chosen to ignore Obama's legislative record, and are promoting the Democratic presidential candidate to their anti-abortion allies as someone who could achieve a new consensus on the issue. "He has the unique skills to try to lower the temperature and foster a sense of common ground, and try to figure out ways that people can agree," Casey said.

The endorsements send a powerful signal in two critical battlegrounds: Pennsylvania, which will hold its primary on April 22; and Indiana, which will vote on May 6. Both states have sizeable segments of socially conservative Democrats who reject the party's absolutist stance on the issue.

Last week in Indiana, Obama said that both sides of the abortion debate are guilty of hyperbole.

"The mistake pro-choice forces have sometimes made in the past, and this is a generalization ... has been to not acknowledge the wrenching moral issues involved," he said. "And so the debate got so polarized that both sides tended to exaggerate the other side's positions. Most Americans, I think, recognize that what we want to do is avoid, or help people avoid, making this difficult choice."

Casey and Roemer, along with others, he continued, "get a sense that I am listening to them and respect their positions, even though where we come down may be different."

Clinton has also sought to break from Democratic orthodoxy on abortion. So, regardless of who wins the nomination, Democrats are likely to try seek to defuse the issue in the general election. Clinton co-wrote, with Senate Majority Leader Harry M. Reid, D-Nev., a significant abortion-prevention bill in January 2005; Obama signed on early as a co-sponsor.

Sect Moms Appeal to Texas Gov.

SAN ANGELO, TEXAS | The mothers of children removed from a polygamous sect's ranch in West Texas after an abuse allegation are appealing to Gov. Rick Perry for help, saying some of their children have become sick and even required hospitalization.

In the letter, the mothers from the Fundamentalist Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints also say children are "horrified" by physical examinations they have undergone while in state custody. The mothers said they want Perry to examine the conditions in which the removed children have been placed.

"You would be appalled," the letter said. "Many of our children have become sick as a result of the conditions they have been placed in. Some have even had to be taken to the hospital. ... The exposure to these conditions is traumatizing them." JENNIFER DOBNER (AP)

Pope Benedict's first trip to the United States begins Tuesday. He will spend five days in Washington and New York, and is scheduled to speak at the United Nations.

Grand Welcome Planned for Pope

Bush is pulling out all the stops for Benedict's first visit to the U.S.

WASHINGTON | The leader of the world's 1 billion Roman Catholics has been to the White House only once in history. That changes this week, and President Bush is pulling out all the stops: driving out to a suburban military base to meet Pope Benedict XVI's plane, bringing a giant audience to the South Lawn and hosting a fancy East Room dinner.

These are all firsts.

Bush has never given a visiting leader the honor of picking him up at the airport. In fact, no president has done so at Andrews Air Force Base, the typical landing spot for modern leaders.

A crowd of up to 12,000 is due at the White House on Wednesday morning for the pope's official, pomp-filled arrival ceremony. It will feature the U.S. and Holy See anthems, a 21-gun salute, and the U.S. Army Old Guard Fife and Drum Corps. Both men will make remarks before their Oval Office meeting and a send-off for his popemobile down Pennsylvania Avenue.

The White House crowd will be the largest of Bush's presidency. It even beats the audience last spring for Queen Elizabeth II, which numbered about 7,000.

The president explained the special treatment — particularly the airport greeting.

"One, he speaks for millions. Two, he doesn't come as a politician; he comes as a man of faith," Bush told the EWTN Global Catholic Network in an interview aired Friday. He added that he wanted to honor Benedict's conviction that "there's right and wrong in life, that moral relativism has a danger of undermining the capacity to have more hopeful and free societies."

On social issues such as abortion, gay marriage and stem cell research, Bush and Benedict have plenty of common ground. But they disagree over the war in Iraq, just as Bush did with Benedict's predecessor, Pope John Paul II.

Iranian officials raised the death toll from an explosion in a packed mosque in Iran to 12 on Sunday and said more than 200 had been injured in the blast. Kenyan President Names Rival PM

Leaders implement power-sharing deal signed in February

NAIROBI, KENYA | President Mwai Kibaki named opposition leader Raila Odinga as prime minister Sunday, implementing a long-awaited power-sharing deal aimed at resolving a political crisis that left more than 1,000 people dead.

The deal — signed more than a month ago — marks the first time Kenya will have both a president and a prime minister. But the working relationship between Kibaki and Odinga, which has been frosty in the past, will determine how long the coalition lasts.

The two men agreed in February to share power after a dispute over who won Kenya's December presidential election triggered weeks of violent unrest.

As negotiations over the Cabinet dragged on, the public grew impatient. Last week, scuffles broke out between police and residents protesting the delay.

Kenyan President Mwai Kibaki, center, shakes hands with rival Raila Odinga.

On Sunday, Kibaki announced the new Cabinet, with the 40 ministries split equally between his Party of National Unity and its allied parties and Odinga's Orange Democratic Movement. Kibaki made the announcement a day after holding closed-door talks with Odinga.

The Kenyan leaders now must try to heal a divided nation, as well as restore one of Africa's most promising economies. Legally, the coalition will last until either the current parliament's term ends in 2012 or a new constitution is enacted. TOM MALITI (AP)

Iraq Sacks 1,300 Who Deserted

Government ousts disloyal forces, adds to pressure on al-Sadr

BAGHDAD | Iraq's government moved Sunday to restore discipline within the ranks of the security forces, sacking more than 1,300 soldiers and policemen who deserted during recent fighting against Shiite militias in Basra.

At the same time, Iraq's Cabinet ratcheted up the pressure on anti-American Shiite cleric Muqtada al-Sadr by approving draft legislation barring political parties with militias from participating in upcoming provincial elections.

Al-Sadr, who heads the country's biggest militia, the Mahdi Army, has been under intense pressure from Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki to disband the Mahdi Army or face political isolation. Al-Sadr's followers are eager to take part in local elections because they believe they can take power away from rival Shiite parties in the vast, oil-rich Shiite heartland of southern Iraq.

In a new move to stem the flow of money to armed groups, the Iraqi government ordered a crackdown on militiamen controlling gas stations, refineries and oil distribution centers. SLOBODAN LEKIC (AP)

Afghan Official: Coalition Supplies Taliban With Weapons

KABUL, AFGHANISTAN | A coalition helicopter trying to supply Afghan police with munitions dropped them in the wrong location and Taliban fighters later recovered the weapons, an Afghan official said Sunday.

A member of parliament, however, said he did not believe the arms drop was an accident.

Amrullah Saleh, the head of Afghanistan's intelligence service, told a parliament security committee "coalition forces" intended to place weapons, ammunition and food at a police checkpoint in a remote section of the southern province of Zabul in late March.

"By mistake, it was dropped somewhere far from the checkpoint. Later, the Taliban came and they picked it up," Saleh told reporters after addressing the committee.

It was not clear whose helicopter left the supplies. NATO's International Security Assistance Force and the U.S.-led coalition said it was not theirs. (AP)

Zimbabwe Will Recount Ballots

HARARE, ZIMBABWE | Authorities said Sunday they would recount the votes from nearly two dozen parliamentary races as Zimbabwe's ruling party sought to overturn election results that cost it control of the legislature for the first time in the nation's history.

As Zimbabwe's election crisis headed into a third week — with the results of the vote still not released — southern African leaders held an emergency summit and called for the verification of results in the presence of all parties.

The summit declaration, following an all-night meeting in neighboring Zambia that ended Sunday morning, fell far short of opposition calls for neighboring leaders to pressure President Robert Mugabe to step down after 28 years in power. (AP)

Italians Cast Votes in Early Election

Parliamentary poll could restore ex-PM Berlusconi to power

ROME | Italians fed up with the governing class and a stagnant economy voted Sunday in early parliamentary elections that could return billionaire and former prime minister Silvio Berlusconi to power.

The 71-year-old media mogul's main opponent is Walter Veltroni, a center-left former mayor of Rome who has promised deep reforms and an ideology-free approach to tackling the country's problems.

A sense of malaise hung over the elections, with Italians pessimistic that the ruling class — dominated for years by the same key figures — can offer much chance of change.

Former Italian Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi casts his ballot during elections in Milan, Italy, on Sunday. There are 945 parliamentary seats up for grabs in the vote.

The election comes three years early due to the premature collapse of Romano Prodi's left-wing government. Italy has a history of political instability, with more than 60 governments since World War II.

The winner faces Italy's perpetual problem — improving the economy, the world's seventh largest. It has underperformed the rest of the euro zone for years, and the International Monetary Fund forecasts growth of 0.3 percent this year, compared with a 1.4 percent average growth for the 15-country euro area.

There are 945 parliamentary seats up for grabs in the vote, which was scheduled to resume Monday morning until early afternoon.

Turnout was running at 64 percent late Sunday, slightly behind the 66 percent at the same time during the last vote in 2006. COLLEEN BARRY (AP)

Israeli Heads Shun Carter

Ex-president to meet with Hamas but not any key Israeli officials

JERUSALEM | Former President Jimmy Carter brokered the first Israeli-Arab peace deal, but he's getting a cool reception in Israel on his latest trip to the Mideast.

Israeli leaders are shunning the globe-trotting peacemaker for planning to meet with Khaled Mashaal, the head of Israel's archenemy Hamas, and comparing the Jewish state's policies to apartheid.

A schedule released by the Atlanta-based Carter Center showed no plans for the former president to meet any of Israel's key players — Prime Minister Ehud Olmert, Foreign Minister Tzipi Livni or Defense Minister Ehud Barak — during this week's visit, which began Sunday.

The only high-ranking official on Carter's schedule was Israel's ceremonial head of state, President Shimon Peres. The 83-year-old former U.S. leader held a closed meeting with Peres after arriving Sunday.

A senior Israeli official said

"scheduling problems" was the official reason given for the high-profile snub — even though Olmert recently took time to chat with "Prison Break" star Wentworth Miller.

But the real reason for the cold shoulder is Carter's plan to meet with Mashaal when his Carter Center delegation travels later this week to Damascus, Syria, the Israel official said.

Israel's leaders are not publicly criticizing Carter, out of respect for his former position as U.S. president, the official added. He spoke on condition of anonymity because his explanation went beyond the official position.

Ahead of his Mideast trip, Carter defended his reasons for wanting to engage Hamas and said he feels "quite at ease" about meeting with Hamas militants. AMY TEIBEL (AP)

BLACKSBURG, VA. | Heidi Miller is grateful for many things: her classes at Virginia Tech, tennis games — and anything that makes her smile.

She craves normalcy, treasuring a return to the routine she had as a freshman last year, before bullets lodged in her knee, thigh and abdomen during a rampage that left 33 dead, including the shooter.

Miller remembers what happened that chilly spring day — April 16 — but can't recapture her thoughts as she came face to face with death in a Norris Hall class-

He left once and came back as she lay completely still on the floor in the back of the room. "I do have pretty vivid memories," she says, "but I'm able to take myself back out of it really quick."

Miller's actions this year have helped keep those thoughts from overtaking her. Sludge Tested in Baltimore

Fertilizer made from waste was spread in low-income areas

BALTIMORE | Scientists using federal grants spread fertilizer made from human and industrial waste on yards in poor, black neighborhoods to test whether it might protect children from lead poisoning in the soil. Families were assured the sludge was safe and were never told about any harmful ingredients.

Nine low-income families in Baltimore agreed to let researchers till the sewage sludge into their yards and plant new grass. In exchange, they were given food coupons as well as the free lawns as part of a study published in 2005 and funded by the Housing and Urban Development Department.

The Associated Press reviewed grant documents obtained under the Freedom of Information Act and interviewed researchers. No one involved with the $446,231 grant for the two-year study would identify the participants. There is no evidence there was ever any medical follow-up. (AP)

3 Rescued From D.C. Building Fire

WASHINGTON | D.C. firefighters rescued three people from a fire at an apartment building in Southeast Washington Sunday.

D.C. fire department spokesman Alan Etter says firefighters were called at about 3 p.m. He says the fire began on the first floor and extended to the second.

Etter says firefighters rescued a 60-year-old man who had mobility problems. The man suffered smoke inhalation and second-degree burns to his feet and was taken to a hospital.

Firefighters also rescued two other men from the second floor of the building. They were treated on the scene for smoke inhalation.

The cause of the fire is still under investigation. (AP)

CBS took a risk by offering the entire series debut of "Big Bang Theory" online last fall.

The Online TV Theory

Networks look to grow on the Web and keep their loyal viewers

CLICK HERE | CBS Corp. executives took an unusual risk last fall before its series debut of "Big Bang Theory" — it offered the entire episode online despite the chance it would sap viewership for the TV premiere.

The show, about two geeky physicists and their beautiful female neighbor, got 90,000 views on CBS.com and other Web sites over a week, followed by a better-than-expected 9.5 million for the Sept. 24 on-air premiere.

"The thought was purely to try to find new eyeballs in a medium that generally appeals to younger demographics, and then drive them to put butts in seats to watch on their beautiful plasma-screen TV when the series takes off," said Quincy Smith, president of CBS Interactive. "It was fairly radical, and we're happy with how it came out."

Looking to tap new revenue through online ads, attract new viewers and keep loyal fans, broadcast networks are making bigger, riskier bets on Internet delivery of their shows. The challenge is to grow viewership online without cannibalizing traditional ratings and DVD sales while making more money on programming seen on the Web.

But online audiences are still limited, a stumbling block that's expected to be a hot topic at the National Association of Broadcasters' annual gathering, which starts Monday in Las Vegas.

According to comScore Media Metrix, ABC.com led the network pack with 8.5 million unique visitors over its entire lineup of shows for the whole month of February, followed by NBC.com with 7.9 million. By comparison, a single episode of CBS's "CSI" recently took in more than 20 million TV viewers in one night.

Still, there are signs that the online experimentation will pay off. Networks now charge advertisers more per thousand viewers online than they do over the airwaves, where the average for a prime-time show is about $25. Analysts put the online rate anywhere from $35 to $50 per thousand, though there are millions more potential traditional TV viewers.

Advertisers pay more online because there is a better accounting of how many viewers see the ads and an extra benefit that an impulse to purchase can be acted on with the click of a mouse.

Apple promotes how easy it is to convert your PC files over to your Mac. Is it really that easy? I have a lot of jpgs, MSWord docs, MP3s and .wav files on my PC and would hate to find out after I bought a Mac that these files can't be converted over. What file types should I be worried about moving over to the Mac?

OS X's iTunes and iPhoto will handle all of the music and photo files, while you've got a wide variety of choices to open Word files — Microsoft's Office 2008, Apple's iWork, Google Docs, the free NeoOffice.

Is there any reason I could not, or should not, view digital TV on a computer, such as an iMac? Would the picture quality suffer? Would I lose some features of digital broadcasting?

Not all of these digital-TV tuners come with good software — I've had zero success with this Pinnacle add-on, thanks to the truly wretched Windows software included with it.

How much of a role do you want one company to have in your life?

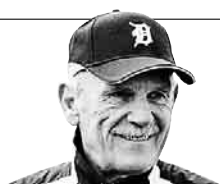

Is there any reason not to use Gmail? Some conspiracy theorists seem to think that Gmail cross-references e-mail with Web searches and forms a more detailed profile of the user than he might be comfortable with. Even the generation of ads based on the content of the e-mail seems a little spooky. Is this something to worry about?

The ad system is something you should consider about Gmail. The larger issue, though, is this: How much of a role do you want any one company to have in your life? I don't have a good answer for that, but you should think about it.

Capitals Held Scoreless in Game 2

Washington comes out flat; top line is shut down by Philadelphia

CAPITALS | Looking tired and frustrated, Alex Ovechkin had trouble simply getting his stick on the puck a couple of times as the game wore on. The Philadelphia Flyers had stymied him again, this time with no allowances for any late-game heroics.

The Flyers shut down the favorite for league MVP, while R.J. Umberger and Jeff Carter scored first-period goals, and Martin Biron got his third shutout in four games Sunday to take a 2-0 victory over the Washington Capitals and even their Eastern Conference series at one game apiece.

The Flyers return home for Tuesday's Game 3 knowing they've had their way with the Capitals for five of six periods. Were it not for a third-period collapse in Game 1, they'd be up 2-0 in the series.

"Everybody always says you want to split, going on the road, after the first two games," said Biron, who made 24 saves. "We played really well on the road, and now we have to carry that over."

Biron kicked Ovechkin's power-play wrist shot away in the first period, used the handle of his stick to deflect Alexander Semin's break-

By contrast, the Capitals — and their fans — appeared to have overspent on playoff excitement in Game 1. The team lacked the energy and creativity it showed in Friday's 5-4 victory.

Ovechkin went for broke in the first period, staying on the ice for 10 minutes spanning just six shifts. The 22-year-old Russian scored the winner in the third period Friday after failing to get a shot on goal in the first two periods, but on Sunday he had three of his five shots in the opening period. He and his line, however, were held relatively quiet for most of the game.

"I didn't like how much he played," Washington coach Bruce Boudreau said. "He stayed on too long. It's hard when it's Alex. He wants to go so badly. He gets it in his head, 'I can do it,' and most nights he can. He

TWO EASY

The Flyers got all the goals they needed with a pair of odd-man rushes in the first period:

- Six minutes into the game, defenseman Braydon Coburn made a long lead pass from his own end to Umberger, who split the defense and beat goaltender Cristobal Huet high.
- A careless turnover by Mike Green at center ice led to the second goal. Mike Knuble took the puck from Green and started a 2-on-1 rush. Huet made a kick save on Knuble's shot, but Jeff Carter was there to chip in the rebound.

looked a little tired, but he looked a little frustrated as well."

Ovechkin didn't get pushed around quite as much as he did in Game 1, but at times he and his teammates were merely out of sync.

The loss ended the Capitals' eight-game winning streak, and a seven-in-a-row run at home.

"We didn't play hard," Ovechkin said, "and we didn't play our style."

Raptors' Loss Drops Them Into Tie for 6th Seed

NBA | Jason Maxiell and Rodney Stuckey combined for 18 fourth-quarter points as the Pistons beat the Raptors 91-84 on Sunday.

The loss drops Toronto (40-40) into a tie with Philadelphia for the Eastern Conference's sixth seed with two games left, although the Raptors have the tiebreaker.

The Pistons had all five starters on the bench, having already clinched the second seed.

But Maxiell and Stuckey helped Detroit's young second unit outplay the Toronto regulars. Stuckey led the Pistons with 18 points, while Maxiell added 14 each. (AP) day tied with the Hornets for the top spot in the conference.

A victory over visiting Sacramento on Tuesday night in the regular-season finale would put the Lakers in position to be the top seed, giving them home-court advantage in the first three rounds of the playoffs.

Bryant scored seven points in the last 2½ minutes of the quarter to make it 79-67 entering the final period. The Spurs missed their first seven field goal attempts of the third quarter and wound up going 3-for-17 in the period.

The Lakers put the game away by outscoring the Spurs 19-5 to start the fourth quarter for a 98-72 lead.

Nats End 9-Game Losing Streak

Braves spot Nationals 5 runs in the first, which is barely enough

Nationals | Tom Glavine has made 672 starts in the majors. Twice, 19 years apart, he failed to record an out.

The second time came Sunday against the reeling Washington Nationals, when the Atlanta Braves' 42-year-old lefty departed with a strained right hamstring and was charged with two runs. The reliever who replaced him, Jeff Bennett, walked in two other runs, then hit a batter who scored, too.

Essentially handed a 5-0 lead, the Nationals gave nearly all of that back, then escaped a bases-loaded jam in the top of the ninth to beat the Braves 5-4 and end a nine-game losing streak.

Washington starter Tim Lincecum (2-1) and five relievers did just enough to end the Nationals' longest losing streak since the franchise moved to the nation's capital.

BRAVES	0	0	0	0	0	3	0	1	0	4
NATIONALS	2	2	1	0	0	0	0	0	X	5

The Nats celebrate their 5-4 win over the Braves on Sunday. Washington scored five runs in the first inning and then allowed the Braves to load the bases in the ninth.

"It was an important win for us," third baseman Ryan Zimmerman said. "We needed it to get back on track."

Redding was charged with three runs in five-plus innings. Atlanta pulled within 5-4 in the eighth on left fielder Wily Mo Pena's error, dropping a ball hit by Mark Kotsay.

Another Nationals player making his first appearance of the season was closer Chad Cordero. A day after coming off the DL, he got two outs then loaded the bases in the ninth and was replaced by Jon Rauch, who came on to face Brian McCann.

The Nationals had the right guy on the mound: McCann came in 0-for-8 against Rauch.

So the 6-foot-11 righty threw one fastball, McCann swung and flied out to right, and Rauch earned his second save.

"We want to get this thing going," said Lastings Milledge, who had three hits. "We want to win nine in a row. So, it started today."

Brian Bannister had a plan against the Minnesota Twins, and it worked out perfectly. As a result, the Kansas City Royals snapped a three-game losing streak with a 5-1 victory over the Twins and Francisco Liriano, who was making his first major league appearance in 17 months. Bannister pitched the second complete game of his career, giving up only one walk and one unearned run. He struck out three. (AP)

Burres Allows 6 Runs In O's Loss to the Rays

After 4 hitless innings, Tampa Bay dominates Baltimore's pitching

ORIOLES | Jeff Niemann allowed one run over six innings in his major league debut and B.J. Upton hit a three-run homer during a six-run fifth, helping the Tampa Bay Rays beat the Baltimore Orioles 6-2 on Sunday.

The 6-foot-9 right-hander gave up six hits and one walk, and had five strikeouts.

The Rays were held without a hit through four by Brian Burres but chased the left-hander with two outs in the fifth after scoring six times for a 6-0 lead.

Burres (1-1) allowed six runs and five hits in 4 2/3 innings. He has given up 22 earned runs over 16 1/3 innings in nine career appearances

Nick Markakis hit a solo homer off Niemann in the sixth. He also drew a bases-loaded walk one inning later, when the Orioles scored just once after loading the bases with no outs.

Trevor Immelman reacts after winning the Masters by three strokes on Sunday.

Immelman Bests Tiger at Augusta

South African golfer led by as many as 6 shots on the back nine

GOLF | Trevor Immelman has never felt better.

Four months after he had a tumor removed from his back, Immelman handled the pressure of Augusta National far better than anyone chasing him Sunday to win the Masters, the first South African in a green jacket in 30 years.

Immelman held it together and stretched his lead to as many as six shots on the back nine, taking the life out of a Masters that began with so much hype.

A two-putt par on the final hole gave him a 3-over 75, matching the highest final round by a Masters champion. Even so, it was good enough for a three-shot victory over Tiger Woods, whose hopes for a calendar Grand Slam ended with a thud.

Woods never got within five shots of the lead when he was on the course, twice missed birdie putts inside 8 feet and had to settle for a 72 and his second consecutive runner-up finish in the Masters.

"I learned my lesson there with the press," said Woods, who started the talk about a Grand Slam by stating three months ago that winning all four majors in the same year was "easily within reason."

The only slam possibilities now belongs to Immelman, a 28-year-old with a polished swing, who finally realized his potential in the final round that yielded only four rounds under par.

Immelman started the week with a practice round with Gary Player, who won the Masters in 1978.

"He's been on me all week, telling me to believe in myself," Immelman said. "He also told me to keep my head still on putts. It's really a special moment, and I'm glad I pulled it through for him." DOUG FERGUSON (AP)

DAVIS CLUTCH: Andy Roddick proved dominant again in the Davis Cup, sending the U.S. past France on Sunday and into the semifinals against Spain. While he was held to 17 aces, he lost only 13 points on his serve to improve to 10-0 in clinching situations for the U.S.

Stats May Derail Garnett's MVP Bid

Celtics player is on the best NBA team but lacks Kobe's numbers

NBA | Kevin Garnett stood tall by his team's bench, his piercing eyes focused on the action on the court.

It was a meaningless game. The Boston Celtics already had clinched the NBA's best record, and coach Doc Rivers was resting his starters for the entire fourth quarter last Tuesday night in Milwaukee. But there was no rest for KG. There rarely is.

As his teammates relaxed on the bench, Garnett watched anxiously as the Celtics' subs blew a big lead, then held on to beat the Bucks 107-104 in overtime.

Even when Garnett isn't playing, he's into the game. Practices, pregame shootarounds, postgame news conferences — the look is serious and intense.

Maybe Garnett won't win his second most valuable player award. Most stats favor Kobe Bryant, LeBron James and Chris Paul. Other than the important one — wins — Garnett's numbers don't compare. He was averaging 18.9 points, 9.3 rebounds, 1.23 blocks, 3.5 assists and 33.1 minutes going into Saturday's game, all his lowest in at least 10 seasons.

He is the best player on the team with the NBA's best record. He's led the Celtics to the biggest single-season turnaround in league history, breaking San Antonio's record 36-game improvement. And he's the inspiration for a hard-working team.

"Look at the team. Look at the team's record. Look at the turnaround," Ray Allen said. "I think he's probably the more unselfish guy in the NBA [of the top MVP candidates] that's made his team better. It's not just the offensive perspective." HOWARD ULMAN (AP)

MURDER AND A MOVIE: "Prom Night," the remake (starring Brittany Snow) of the 1980 slasher flick, took in $22.7 million to debut as the weekend's No. 1 movie. Opening in second place was "Street Kings," a cop drama starring Keanu Reeves.

Modest Mouse

A.C. Newman of the New Pornographers can't believe the hype

DESSERT | Carl Newman has cut himself a monster slice of humble pie and eaten the whole thing.

"Sometimes I feel like a complete charlatan, a complete fake," says the frontman of Canadian indie-pop powerhouse the New Pornogra-phers. "People write about me like I'm this Brian Wilson-ish producer, multi-instrumentalist. When, really, I'm just like this hack."

That's nice, Carl. But anyone familiar with Carl "A.C." Newman's work knows he's got no place being so humble about anything.

Newman, who sings, plays a multitude of string instruments and writes the majority of the New Pornographers' songs.

To read our conversation with New Pornographer Carl "A.C." Newman, visit readexpress.com/entertainment.php

The band's seven other members include Dan Bejar of Destroyer and Neko Case, the alt-country solo artist whose bewitching voice becomes more central to the group's sound with each album.

Kathryn Calder, John Collins, Kurt Dahle, Todd Fancey and Blaine Thurier round out the large family.

What The New Pornographers are making a serious impression on the music world. The group's first album, "Mass Romantic," was named the 24th best indie album of all time by Blender magazine in 2007. They also picked up a Juno award in 2001 (that's Canadian for a Grammy). Currently, the New Pornos are on tour promoting their fourth record, "Challengers."

While they stick to their power-pop roots, layered vocal harmonies and complex arrangements, "Challengers" offers a toned down, organic version of their previous work.

Although less convoluted than his usual writing, Newman's penning of the romantic title track still packs a beautiful punch. "People say I write very oblique or elliptical or obtuse lyrics," he says, "and on 'Challengers' I wanted a song that was very clear and very clearly about something."

The New Pornographers play two sold-out shows at the 9:30 Club this week. Not so bad for a self-proclaimed "hack."

We know it's because he brings joy to the ears, but humble Carl might wrongly argue that it's just because he's around. "I'm like Sonny Bono, you know? Not the most talented, good-looking guy, but he's always there, he always shows up."

An Impressive Follow-Up Act

'Walk It Off' proves Tapes 'N Tapes works well under pressure

MUSIC | You had to feel sorry for Tapes 'N Tapes.

The 2006 debut of the Minneapolis quartet was a series of quick jabs to the ribs, aquiver with pure energy and joy. "The Loon," with its infectious opener, "Just Drums," was the best kind of rock 'n' roll — simple, urgent, funny and chock-full of juicy hooks big and small.

How to top such an eye-catching debut and keep that energy level at the red line?

The group chose producer Dave Fridmann, best known for his work with the Flaming Lips, to help with their all-important second album, "Walk It Off." His presence is palpable in a few fuzzy Lipsian strokes of psychedelia.

Overall, Tapes 'N Tapes sounds like a band very much aware that everyone is watching and doesn't

The band didn't let the success of their first album trip them up in round two.

flub the moment.

"Walk It Off" isn't as light on its feet as "The Loon." It's full of complex ideas, introspective moments and more instrumental exploration.

Singer Josh Grier is all cocky good times and razor-sharp staccato from his guitar on "Hang Them All" and "Headshock." And drummer Jeremy Hanson seems to benefit most from Fridmann's presence with an impressive array of textures and tempos.

Cross Back Over

Enrique Iglesias has not forgotten his fans who speak Spanish

EN ESPAÑOL | Enrique Iglesias has just finished a two-month trek of Europe, where he was touring in support of his 2007 English-language release, "Insomniac." Now, he's preparing for "95/08," an all-hits Spanish-language release.

On the eve of his album's release, Iglesias spoke with Billboard about straddling many markets and many styles in an ever-changing business.

In 1995, your first Spanish-language album sold 600,000 copies, on Fonovisa, an indie label. Now, you face a dramatically different business.

I remember the label was worried that in Mexico the local currency was devaluated and they would sell half of what they normally sold. If they only knew what would happen today. I think it's easier to stay afloat when you already have a career. Think how difficult it is now to develop artists when you have a lot less people working in a label. And the budgets are completely different.

You tour and release albums in very far-flung places. In a compressed industry, how important is that, really?

Oh, my God, so important. Especially because I see my career has gone through different stages, where maybe I've done better at one point in Europe than in Latin America, or in Asia than in Europe. And, honestly, I don't think Anglos give as much importance to Spanish-language albums. But any sale is worthwhile. For example, of those 3 million people that bought one of my English-language albums, why wouldn't 50,000 or 100,000 of them buy my Spanish album?

Your new album includes 18 songs that have made it to No. 1 on Billboard's Hot Latin Songs chart, more than any other act. Obviously, radio is crucial for you.

I know a lot of companies say you cannot only depend on radio nowadays, but I still believe radio is the best instrument you have to sell records. There's nothing like the magic of radio. You get in the car and you listen to a song you love, and that makes me — personally — go buy an album. LEILA COBO (BILLBOARD)

FIRST LADY: Sandalow takes an in-depth look at the life of the first female speaker.

Pelosi: A Pragmatic Liberal

Marc Sandalow profiles Nancy Pelosi in 'Madame Speaker'

REALIST | "She's almost as far left as any member of Congress," says author Marc Sandalow of Rep. Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif. "Prior to her Speakership, in 20 years in Congress, the only vote she took that disappointed the left was her vote in favor of NAFTA in 1994. On every other major issue, she's been on the left."

Sandalow's new book, "Madame Speaker: Nancy Pelosi's Life, Times, and Rise to Power," shows Pelosi as a hardline Dem from the womb, offering a nice, if vague, portrait of her Italian-American family's life in Baltimore, where her father and brother were highly successful politicians. Li'l Nancy was on the cover of the newspaper the day she was born.

Sandalow shows Pelosi as a mother, successful activist and fundraiser who eventually runs for Congress at 47 and then methodically climbs to its upper reaches. Sandalow sees the speaker's ascent as a product of discipline, timing and an ideology that could be termed pragmatic liberalism.

"Just recently, she was on the floor of the House arguing in favor of transgender rights," Sandalow said. "Now, the transgender rights did not get adopted by the House. In a move that a lot of gay leaders were mad at her about, she dropped transgender rights from a gay, lesbian, bisexual job discrimination bill. Her view is, 'We push for what we can get. How many speakers of the House have gone to the floor and spoken in favor of transgender rights?" She leads as a pragmatist."

The author — who was not granted access for this biography — believes that the speaker also sees Iraq as a pragmatist.

"It's a political calculation: How do we get the most done? For her, it's a matter of increasing the [Democratic] majority in the House. You don't do that by taking those kinds of stances [cutting off war funding]. If you do that, I think the calculation is that the moderate Democrats — who put her in the majority — end up losing power in 2008 and then they have nothing to work with if they win the White House." TIM FOLLOS

Poetry in Motion

Legendary author Walt Whitman is brought back to life

BRILLIANCE | The moments when television reaches for the sublime, the beautiful, the poetic and transporting are few indeed. So, viewers in search of that transcendent moment shouldn't miss "Walt Whitman" on "American Experience" (9 p.m., PBS), featuring actor Chris Cooper as the voice of the poet.

This contemplative look at a uniquely American figure presents us with his central contradiction. While Whitman set out to celebrate the human body and its pleasures as a temple for a new democratic American spirituality, the central event of his life was his work during the Civil War tending to sick and dying soldiers whose mutilated bodies and terrified final moments he described with a journalist's eye and a poet's heart.

It's fitting that this profile airs on the anniversary of Abraham Lincoln's assassination. Whitman and the president had a passing acquaintance on the muddy streets of wartime Washington, and Whitman referred to him as the "redeemer" president even before his martyrdom made that moniker all the more tragically apt. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Coffee bean blends could give a jolt to an East African economy

In a room that resembles a high school chemistry lab, the keepers of the world's oldest coffee culture are learning a new way to understand the rich aroma of a cup of java.

Is that a waft of honey? Of shoe leather? Maybe walnuts?

That last one is particularly hard here in Ethiopia, where most people have never seen, much less smelled, a walnut. And in a gourmet coffee market dominated by Western corporations and Western terms, that's a handicap.

Until now, those companies had a near monopoly on the expertise to capitalize on Ethiopia's best beans.

But that may be changing. Ethiopians know that coffee — which originated in this impoverished East African nation — can be their ticket to the First World. And the biggest profits are in the most gourmet blends.

For the 2006-2007 growing season, Ethiopia was the world's fifth largest producer of coffee.

So, during the past five years, a partnership has grown among private buyers, humanitarian agencies and local government to nurture homegrown experts in pursuit of ever-more-boutique brews to capture higher prices.

Coffee already is the main source of foreign currency here. So much so that the government prohibits the selling of export-quality coffee domestically.

But the coffee market fluctuates, and past downturns have threatened Ethiopia's livelihood. Specialty beans are less affected by market dips, and hitching its fortunes to those brews could help the nation stabilize its economy.

Success also could be good for the country's partners — buyers of gourmet beans — who need new specialty beans with which to woo the type of Western consumers who buy $1,000 coffee makers.

The coffee-smelling training is a key step. While Ethiopian farmers and traders can distinguish between exportable and nonexportable beans, they've lacked the training to make more refined — and more lucrative — distinctions.

"You can really, if you taste well, connect a sense of taste with a sense of place," says Ted Lingle, the head of the Specialty Coffee Association of America, who is leading the coffee training for growers and traders in Ethiopia's capital, Addis Ababa.

His group wants to develop rivals to Panama's Esmeralda Special, a coffee that set records last year when its unroasted beans sold for $130 per pound at an online auction. Those beans are believed to come from a tree variety that was exported from Ethiopia in 1931.

The hope is that the next Esmeralda Special could be discovered here. And the odds seem to favor it.

Columbia, the world's second-largest coffee producer, has about a dozen tree varieties while Ethiopia boasts about 6,000 varieties, thousands more than anywhere else in the world, according to Lingle.

BUZZ ABOUT BEANS: Ethiopians unload coffee beans in Addis Ababa. The country focuses on gourmet bean exports.

Ethiopia's Daily Grind

An Ethiopian man takes in the aroma of coffee during training to refine his palate.

Progress already is being made. For the 2006-2007 growing season, Ethiopia was the world's fifth-largest producer of coffee, growing about 794 million pounds. In specialty coffee, it exported 119 million pounds, making it the third-largest source of gourmet beans after Colombia and Guatemala.

But Ethiopia still has a long way to go.

This is what the coffee-smelling class is trying to change.

With funding from the U.S. and expertise from international coffee professionals, the class offers Ethiopian coffee growers, traders and even government officials the opportunity to become "master cuppers" who can identify the most subtle differences in taste and smell.

Instead of just looking for a generic coffee, exporter Abdullah Bagersh says he wants to start to hear foreign buyers saying, "I want coffee from Ethiopia and from this particular region." HEIDI VOGT (AP)

Furniture companies produce eco-friendly, sustainable furniture

Trevor Webb found something worth admiring at the furniture show in High Point, N.C.: nail holes, scuffs and dents.

“It’s pretty cool, isn’t it?” asked Webb, admiring a massive wood table made by his Van Nuys, Calif.-based furniture company, Urban Woods LLC. “You wouldn’t know this is reclaimed wood from soundstages and old buildings in California unless you look closely.”

Webb, and his furniture, are part of a growing green movement in the home decor industry that promotes recycled materials, wood collected from certified sustainable forests, cushions created from soy, vegetable-based stains and environmentally sound fabric and foam.

Yet there are no national standards that spell out what makes one couch more environmentally friendly than another. Currently, any company can claim itseco-efforts are more green than the next guy.

Dozens of manufacturers touted eco-friendly products at the High Point Market — the twice-annual home decor and furnishings trade show that previews what will be in stores next season.

Industry analysts see it as both a response to a growing need for accountability and an effective marketing tool.

“The industry is reaching out,” said Jerry Epperson, a furniture industry analyst with Richmond, Va.-based investment firm Mann, Armistead and Epperson. “Retailers see it as important to the younger generations.”

Wood used for tables, dressers and frames is typically harvested from responsibly managed forests. Glues and finishes are water-based. Sofas use recycled steel springs, while cushions are soy-based. Fabrics are organic cotton, hemp, bamboo and leather by-products.

Then you have the more unusual offerings, such as chair slip covers made by using multicolored thread scraps or upholstery made from recycled water bottles.

“Everyone has a little something different to offer,” said Hamed Alaghebadian, who’s planning to open a furniture store later this year in Maryland. “My job is to find things that my customers will want to help them maintain a greener lifestyle.”

The shift comes from small producers as well as large manufacturers such as Precedent, Rowe Fine Furniture Inc., Century Furniture LLC and Harden Furniture Inc.

Vaughan-Bassett Furniture Co. has vowed to plant one tree for every tree it uses to produce its furniture — roughly 150,000 saplings per year.

That’s a bold commitment for the Virginia-based company, which is one of the nation’s largest manufacturers of wood furnishings.

“We admit we needed to do something proactive,” spokesman Doug Bassett said.

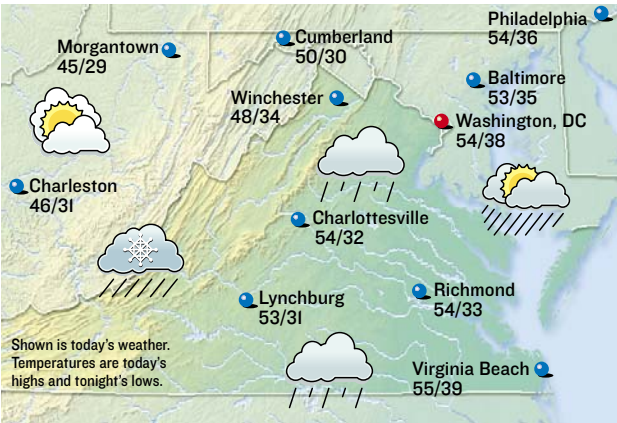

The Sustainable Furniture Council offers guidelines and bases its membership on “evidence of performance, and of commitment to continual and demonstrated improvement in the sustainability of all company operations.”

“Customers want to buy what matters to them,” said Susan Ingalls, executive director of the group.

Parasol Perks

Carrying an umbrella
when it's not raining
is becoming cooler

File
UNDER Fad

↓ Want to look pretty in the shade? A variety of fashionable umbrella options are popping up these days. From hand-painted parasols by PIER I (below, left) to the satin FLORAL PARASOL by TOTES-ISOTONER (below, right), it's easy to look sassy in the sunshine.

Why waste a fashion-forward umbrella on a dreary rainy day?

Sun umbrellas are enjoying a moment in the, er, sun. Parasols were on the runways for several spring collections, and stars have been photographed holding them.

A growing awareness of the sun damage has helped make an old-fashioned affectation hip again.

For spring, Totes-Isotoner made satin sun umbrellas, sun umbrellas in Asian-inspired floral prints and sun umbrellas with bold graphics. They are parasols because they provide sunshade, but they're not the romantic and nostalgic lacy ones that people immediately think of when you say the word, says Ann Headley, director of Totes-Isotoner's rain product development.

Those do exist, Headley says, just in a much smaller quantity.

Fashion designer Anna Sui

makes a strong case for the parasol as an objet d'art. She's put them on the runway at least four times, including the fashion show for the current spring collection. A model matched her turquoise-and-black print blouse to her turquoise-and-black print parasol.

Tracy Reese and Temperley London also used parasols this season.

It provides drama as a prop, but it's also a traditional sunshade, especially in India, China and Japan, as well as in the Old South, when the real-life equivalents of Scarlett O'Hara would use one to keep her skin from freckling, Sui says.

They're gaining celeb appeal. Among the stars photographed with assistants holding umbrellas for them in the sun are Beyonce, Mariah Carey and Michael Jackson. Rihanna even has a new umbrella (ella, ella) line for Totes. SAMANTHA CRITCHELL (AP)

Finally, the moment every girl has been waiting for has arrived: TRACEY REESE presented an umbrella in her spring collection that matches a dress.

The REFRESH'N DRYER TOWEL ($13, Refreshn.net) sounds absurd at first. You dampen it and toss it in the dryer with garments that are wrinkled and linty and maybe a bit smelly but don't need a full wash, and they come out fresh and clean via the power of steam and magical towel fibers. What's astonishing is that it works exactly as described. Clothes pulled from the laundry basket and subjected to the Refresh'n process came out soft, unwrinkled and clean-smelling, good for at least two more wearings. HOLLY J. MORRIS (EXPRESS)

OK, first of all, don't kid yourself into thinking that O.P.I.'s new INDIA COLLECTION ($9 each, see Opi.com for stores) has anything to do with India. NEWS FLASH TO COSMETICS COMPANIES: A pun on "curry" or "yoga" in the title of your product does not make it Indian. Anyway, there are some nice colors: a trendy blue, a lovely summery pink and a few translucent metallics that sometimes look awesome and sometimes look like fungus, depending on how tired you are. The best part is that these polishes dry very fast, so you won't be stuck inside for an hour while you wait for your hands to dry. FIONA ZUBLIN (EXPRESS)

The TV Column

Post TV columnist LISA DE MORAES was online Friday and talked about the possible exit of Katie Couric from the “CBS Evening News,” new life for “Friday Night Lights” and the latest on “American Idol.”

Has “American Idol” disowned Taylor Hicks? You never see his picture, hear any mention of him or see him return to the show. Are they trying to forget what a mistake that whole season was?

It would certainly appear so. How odd that the only Idol to appear on Wednesday’s “Idol Gives Back” was Carrie Underwood, who is arguably the most successful these days. Even last year’s winner, Jordin Sparks, got bumped to “Idol Gives Back Flotsam & Jetsam Night.”

What’s the deal with “Friday Night Lights”? I heard it was picked up but with some weird caveat.

The episodes will be made available first to people who get DirecTV and then will air on NBC. This means NBC is airing reruns, though NBC execs argue so few people get DirecTV it won’t matter that much. Apparently, no one gave them the memo about what was happening with HBO’s “The Wire” episodes when they were offering them on-demand.

Because you know all, please tell us the truth about Katie Couric. Is she leaving CBS after the election in November? I can’t imagine that she would leave such a lucrative contract.

Just because she’s leaving a show, if she is in fact leaving the show, and it sounds like she’s leaving the show, doesn’t mean she’s leaving her contract. That’s the rub! She may become the most expensive syndicated talk-show host ever if that’s what CBS segues her to, as some have speculated.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You should be able to avoid routine dangers with ease—but later on you must use caution, as the unusual may be lying in wait.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Take things slowly, and concentrate on personal comfort. This is a good time to do some special things for yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You are confident that you are doing things right—but you might be missing the slightest point that will make the difference. Look again.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You can bridge great distances through imagination and persistence. Don't let difficulty hold you back; you have what it takes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You'll be at your best when you are improvising. Don't leave others in the dark when at your peak.

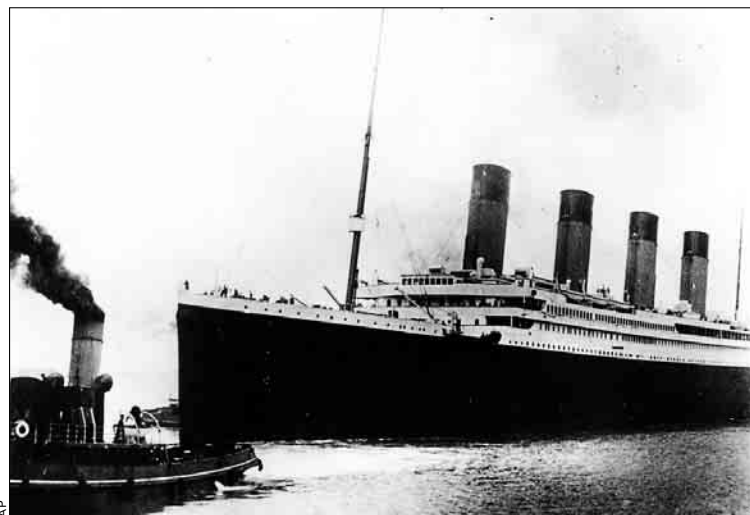

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Your fears and hopes are likely to be intermingled liberally. Look within your own heart and you'll discover a new and valuable yearning.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) It'll be particularly hard to break that bad habit, particularly when a friend or loved one is continually nagging you about it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Woeto anyone who offends you, for you are already on edge and may well lash out in a fashion that is startling to behold.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You may not know what hit you when all is said and done—but the benefits you are likely to enjoy as a result will amaze you and others.
